"The Outdoor Insider"

I had some more fun catching sockeye on Lake Wenatchee last week. Fishing continues to be fantastic. I also hear that the sockeye fishing on the Brewster Pool continues to be great. Now I want to get up to Banks Lake to do some walleye and smallmouth bass fishing. This is one of my favorite things to do in the summer.

What an incredible sockeye season! Over 755,000 entered the Columbia River, according to the counts at Bonneville Dam. As you know, most of these traveled up the Columbia River and on into Canada. Anglers who fish the Brewster Pool have been cashing in on the abundance of sockeye and continue to do so. I plan to make one last trip to the Brewster Pool this week, to try to get a few of these Columbia River fish. I took a look at the reader board at Tumwater Dam recently, and it had posted over 166,000 sockeye passing through on their way to Lake Wenatchee and then onto the spawning beds in the White River. According to the Chelan PUD, it was over 168,000. I will make a couple more trips and then move my boat back home. The quality of the fish has held up amazingly well this season, and I want to take advantage of this. Nothing like having a freezer full of sockeye for the table and for the smoker. I had a ton of fun fishing Lake Wenatchee this season and was able to take many members of my family out. We have some great memories from these trips.

Last year Rob Phillips, outdoor writer for the Yakima Herald-Republic, came up to Lake Wenatchee to fish with me. He had such a good time that when I invited him up again he was eager to make the trip. Last season the fishing was terrific on the day he was here, and I was a bit nervous that I would not be able to repeat such quick limits for us. It was a bit windy when we got to the lake, but nothing like some other mornings that I fished Lake Wenatchee this season. I moved up the lake a ways, put the gear out, and trolled toward the top end. I sweated as each minute passed without strike, but soon the bite came on. When it did we were busy. We got fish on the downriggers that had either three black-hook rigs or red hooks behind double dodgers. I had black and red hooks out the back on eight ounce lead balls, and these rods were bouncing, too. We ended the morning with a double and had to release one fish. I checked my watch, and it did take me 20 minutes longer than last year to get our limits. This week's photo is of Rob with one of the sockeye he landed that morning.

Although I have been cursing the wind at Lake Wenatchee this sockeye season, it has been my experience that it actually has been a blessing. I have had much better fishing on windy days than when it was flat calm, which has been rare. On Tuesday, Rob Phillips and I were headed to the dock by seven in the morning with our limits. When Rollie saw me coming he texted me asking if we were okay. He didn't expect me to finish so early! We had a nice breeze that morning. On Wednesday, Tom Verschuren and I arrived at the lake to find it dead calm. We spent some time at the top end of the lake and talked to several anglers that agreed that the fishing was much slower that morning. We got a few up there and I trolled down the lake and out in the middle. I switched from black hooks to bright orange and pink and that changed things for us. We lost a few fish, including a really big one right at the boat, but managed to get our eight fish by nine o'clock. You can still catch fish on a calm day, it just takes a little longer. Now I am hoping for some wind!

The Lake Wenatchee sockeye fishery is still going strong. Anglers are having good success, with many posting consistent limits. Wind has been an issue this season. Usually, we talk about the number of windy days compared to calm days on the lake, but this year has been the reverse. It has been the calm days that have been scarce. Recently though, there has been a string of clear skies and calm water and talking to other anglers on the water they agree that the action can often be slower with these conditions. This is particularly true when the sun hits the water. About a week ago, when sockeye bites were getting to be far apart, I tried something different. Rather than the three red hook and three black hook setup that worked well in the morning I dug out some of the brightest hooks and beads I had on hand. We limited fairly quickly after the switch. Now I am doing it every day with very good results. It reminded me that you have to be willing to experiment to have success. I am also fishing much deeper to get my sockeye now, too.

I have a very disappointed neighbor. Calder Fiske, who was planning to have a Kids Fishing Derby at Blackbird Island Pond in Leavenworth, is canceling the event. Calder told me he went down to the pond on a calm day last week, when he could take a good look for fish. He didn't see a single trout. Rather than go ahead and have no fish caught, he is going to change his plans for a Kids Fishing Derby to next spring. The WDFW always plants a bunch of catchable size trout in Blackbird Island Pond for kids to catch through the spring and summer. He will have his derby then, when the pond is full of hungry fish. He is sorry for the delay. He had already received the medals he ordered for the winners and was about to put up the posters for the event. We both agree that it is better to wait.

IS THERE A CONNECTION BETWEEN OLD CONCRETE & WATER QUALITY? PART 1

New Study to Identify Possible Pollution & Guide the Industry

Concrete rubble piles like this one are stored at facilities across the state.

Concrete structures like buildings, foundations, and sidewalks, might seem like they will last forever, but modern-day concrete structures generally do not last longer than 50 to 100 years. Concrete is widely used in construction because it is resilient, affordable, and easily available. At the end of their use, concrete structures and products are demolished into rubble (broken up pieces). This rubble can get stored, recycled and reused as building material for structures, roads, sidewalks, and other uses.

Recycling demolished concrete is beneficial since it decreases greenhouse gas emissions, prevents the use of new, raw materials, and reduces production costs. At the same time, the sheer quantity of concrete rubble collected and stored statewide may create unintended water quality issues. In 2017 alone, Washington State collected nearly 1.2 million tons of concrete rubble. That weighs the same as three Empire State buildings. This demolished concrete rubble is typically stored outside at Sand and Gravel facilities, for recycling and reuse in construction projects.

Concrete recycling and manufacturing facilities have water quality permits from the Department of Ecology to ensure facilities follow best management practices to avoid polluting Washington's waters. Today, we are taking a closer look at concrete, including a new study to learn more about the types of pollution that might be coming from concrete rubble.

What's in concrete?

Concrete is more than a bunch of rocks. It is a mixture of many materials called aggregates, such as, sand, gravel, and/or crushed stone held together by a "glue" called cement. Cement is another mixture - made from processed limestone, clay, and water. Adjusting the amounts of all these materials give concrete its unique physical and chemical properties.

Once concrete has hardened into the durable material we commonly see, such as sidewalks or building foundations, it becomes an impervious surface, meaning rainwater runs off of it. However, when concrete is broken up into rubble and stored in piles waiting to be recycled, rainwater can flow through the piles. This new study will look at if rainwater is picking up contaminants, and if so, to what degree. This runoff is called stormwater. We manage stormwater and protect water quality through a number of permit programs.

Understanding concrete rubble and water quality permits

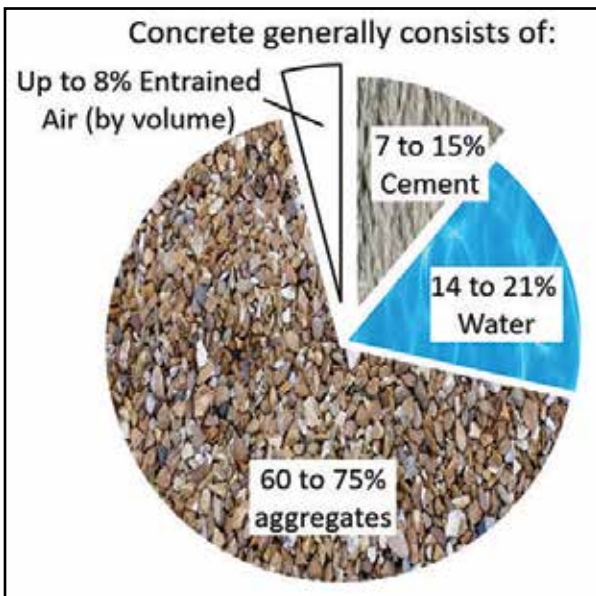

We review and update water quality permits every five years. In reality, this work never stops as we are always reviewing relevant information and learning from permit implementation. However, permits expire every five years, so we take the permit cycle time to update permits as needed. The next time we will update the Sand and Gravel permit is 2025.

One important part of updating a permit is to review the latest research to ensure current permit requirements are protective of water quality. Recently, we reviewed over 200 articles, reports, and papers published in the U.S. and internationally to help us understand what happens when rainwater interacts with concrete rubble and what potential pollutants might leach out into the water that could affect water quality.

The literature review found a list of potential pollutants associated with storing concrete rubble. However, none of the studies we reviewed had information on environmental impacts specific to concrete mixtures made in Washington. For more details, read our report: Recycled Concrete Aggregate Leachate: A Literature Review.

REIF PREVAILS AT TRI-CITY FOR SECOND CONSECUTIVE VICTORY

Brandon White, ARCAracing.com

WEST RICHLAND, Wash. (Aug. 10, 2024) — Race fans who waited more than two decades to witness an ARCA Menards Series West event at Tri-City Raceway were provided a glimpse into NASCAR's future during Saturday's NAPA Auto Care 150.

Tyler Reif and Sean Hingorani, who entered the evening separated by five points in the West Series standings, were the two cars to beat through all 150 laps. Reif would be the one to prevail, by .485 seconds, besting Hingorani during a late-race restart to earn his second consecutive West Series victory.

Trailing Hingorani for most of the night, Reif didn't think he'd be able challenge him if the race had gone uninterrupted to the checkered flag.

One last restart with 18 laps left gave Reif the opening he was looking for. A perfectly timed restart from the outside line allowed him to make the race-winning pass on Hingorani.

"The laps were counting down faster and faster," Reif said. "Those cautions surprised me, but we did what we had to do during those last 75 laps. We practiced on the outside a little bit this weekend and it definitely paid off tonight."

Jack Wood settled for third in the NAPA Auto Care 150 with Todd Souza and Kyle Keller completing the top five. NASCAR legend Greg Biffle, a previous Tri-City track champion, ran in the top five for most of the night, but finished ninth after a late spin.

Notable locals in the field included Ephrata's Kasey Kleyn in sixth finishing all 150 laps, Jeff Havens from Spokane also finished all laps and was eighth while Danica Dart, also from Ephrata, was two laps down and 14th in the 15-car field.

This was the first appearance of the series at Tri City Raceway since June 21, 2003 when Jason Jefferson won the race. Then the series was known as NASCAR Winston West.

TELLSTROM MAKES HISTORY IN 'IDAHO 208' VICTORY

From NWSLM and NW Motorsports News Services

Meridian, Idaho (Aug. 10, 2024) — Duplicating the feat of Jeremy Doss in 2020, Kyle Tellstrom doubled down on his "Idaho 200" win at Stateline Speedway with a victory in the "YMC Mechanical Idaho 208" at Meridian Speedway just weeks apart.

He also won the Pro Late Model portion of the "Idaho 208" weekend to sweep the Late Model portion of events.

Tellstrom, from Ukiah, Calif., picked up over $37,000 for those wins. He took home $10,000 for his victory on Saturday, making him the only repeat winner in "Idaho 208" history. Tellstrom brought home the win in a Senneker Performance Super Late Model owned by Lee Hackney.

Jason Jefferson, John Newhouse, Aubree Cristiani and Wyatt King rounded out the top five.

"Honestly it is relieving", Tellstrom stated about becoming the first two-time winner of the "Idaho 208". "We have really worked hard this year, and it has been a lot of work between my crew and my guys."

Tellstrom started off his winning bid by setting the AFco Racing / Longacre Racing Products Fast Time with a 13.211 second lap on the 1/4-mile oval. The reshuffled start saw Tellstrom start eighth but he moved carefully through the field to fifth by the break.

He eased past Jefferson on lap 117 to chase Newhouse for the lead in a hotly contested battle that ended in contact on lap 124 allowing Jefferson to regain the top spot.

Several laps later on lap 132 and following a caution, Tellstrom took the lead and survived a number of cautions that repeatedly tightened the field for the win.

After his win, Tellstrom recalled the lap 132 winning pass that saw he and Jefferson battling side by side with fenders banging and spark flying.

"It was a little wild", Tellstrom recalled. "Meridian is a lot different than most tracks and I respect Jason a lot and the Jefferson guys a lot. He caught me by surprise on that one restart and we started tagging. Meridian is really tight. I feel when I run the bottom, I am pretty nice and pretty disciplined. He kept squaring the exit off and it just doesn't work here this way. I couldn't go any lower."

Jefferson recalled the action with Tellstrom, as they battled for the lead on multiple restarts over the last 75 laps of the race.

"I really don't know what I was lacking", Jefferson speculated. "I think it may have just been a lack of experience here, is what it was. Obviously, he had a better car, and he's got a lot of laps around here."

NWSLM points leader Kasey Kleyn had his three-race series win streak snapped because he was hundreds of miles away racing at the ARCA West event at Tri City Raceway.

The next series race is Sept. 1 with the Labor Day Spectacular 125 at Hermiston Raceway, Oregon.
