Fishing Magician

Dave Jayne

Reach Dave @ www.FishingMagician.com or FishBoy@nwi.net "The Outdoor Insider"

It sure looks like winter has arrived here in Leavenworth. Although it has snowed quite a bit I am still holding out hope that we get enough rain to wash it away and I can get some more trips in with the Smoker Craft. I don't want to tuck it away too soon and miss some great early winter fishing.

Judging by the amount of snow that we got here in Leavenworth this past week, I picked a great time to be away. My wife and I spent the past week in Zihuatanejo, Mexico, enjoying the sunshine and mid 80s temperatures.

This town of about 160,000 is on the Pacific Coast north of Acapulco. It is known for beautiful beaches and great fishing. One of the first things we did, after getting settled in, was to arrange a fishing trip with Victor Vargas Valle, who we met on the La Ropa Beach in front of our hotel. He picked us up early in the morning and delivered us to the marina, where we were met by his cousins Carlos and Jair aboard their super panga. We headed out of the bay into the open ocean, with "the White Rocks" as our destination fishing grounds. This large rock island has no vegetation and is home to hundreds of birds. Soon after the rods were run out, we hooked a nice bonito, the first of six I would land that day. The first baited hook on an outrigger got a savage strike, but either a big Sierra or shark had cleanly cut the line. Although we didn't get another strike on our bait rod, we did see three huge leatherback turtles and a pod of dolphins. It was a great day on the water. This week's photo was taken on the boat that day.

Whenever I travel, I always take at least one rod along. Sometimes as many as three. When I am heading for Belize, I will take a few, two fly-rods and a spinning rod. On this trip to Zihuatanejo I just took a spinning rod along and a few lures that I felt would be good for species that hang out close to shore. One morning my wife Eileen and I walked to the far edge of La Ropa Beach, where a breakwater met the shoreline. I tried a lure that was really made for topwater bass fishing, but when I threw it as far as I could, where I could see some rocks on the bottom, I saw something slash at it. I finally hooked something that jumped and tore off some line. When I got it to the beach, I discovered that it was a needle fish that was about 3 feet long. These fish are very slender and have a long needle nose with rows of sharp teeth. I released it and although I tried several more casts didn't hook anything else. At one point my lure popped off, but Eileen spotted it on the water, and I was but switched to a pink and white Shimano lure that weighed three ounces and would put me closer to those rocks. The needle fish liked this one, and I landed two, before losing it on one of the rocks. As I was tying on another plug, a snorkeler came up and gave me the lure I had lost. He saw it stuck on the bottom and brought it to me. I was amazed to have my hot lure back, and after a couple more casts I landed a small snapper. Fishing like this was a great way to spend the time on the beach, and next time I will know what kind of lures to take.

Anglers who like to fish for coho on the Icicle here in Leavenworth had some success, but the very low water conditions were an issue. This hampered the return of coho into the Icicle from the Columbia. According to the dam counts there were over 25 thousand coho that passed over Rock Island Dam and over 12 thousand went over Rock Reach. That means that there were as many as 13 thousand that could have run up the Wenatchee River and into the Icicle. Better water conditions came very late in the season, which ends on November 30th, and anglers did enjoy very good action when this occurred. I had heard that the number of coho that arrived made the stream look like something you would see in Alaska.

I checked on the river prior to the end of the season and there were still people fishing and getting near or close to their limits. Everyone is hoping that the big returns of sockeye to the Icicle can be expected every year. Hopefully Mother Nature will cooperate, and we will have higher water to conditions and excellent fishing much earlier in the season.

Now that I am home, I need to get out here locally and see what's going on. If I can't launch the boat, there are great shore fishing opportunities this time of year.

SIMPLE STEPS TO CREATE POSITIVE ENERGY IN YOUR HOME

If you're looking for new ideas to refresh your home, consider taking a few steps to boost your home's positive energy.

Feng shui is the Chinese art of placement, and is based on the premise that people live healthy happy, prosperous lives when they live in harmoniously designed homes.

Feng shui consultant and interior designer Cynthia Chomos says that a few design fixes can even help with the resale of your home.

"A home purchase is one of the biggest and most significant purchases that a consumer will make. It's where we rejuvenate and our lives flourish," Chomos said. "Incorporating feng shui allows us to be more conscious and more intentional with the spaces we inhabit."

Chomos offers several tips to incorporate feng shui in your home:

Strategically place plants in the path of doors and windows that directly align the front of the home with the back. Doing so, she says, helps keep the positive energy – or qi – in the home rather than allowing it to escape from the front out the back.

Furniture placement is also important. Chomos says that occupants should always be able to see the entrance of a room or the home from a seated position, whether in bed, at a desk, or sitting on a sofa.

"One of most primal needs as human beings is to be safe. If we have our backs to the door, we're vulnerable," Chomos said. "This puts us in command and control of our environment."

A foyer or mud room helps establish a sense of arrival, while stairs that are out of the path of the front door helps avoid the negative qi that comes with having to make an immediate decision upon walking into the home. To go upstairs or not?

Rounded corners, instead of sharp ones, and bedrooms toward the rear of the home instead of the front, are other considerations that create good qi and a peaceful environment.

Bathrooms should never sit directly behind a bedroom wall. Because water is in constant motion, it prohibits a good night's sleep.

Interior design consultants with expertise in feng shui can offer recommendations on the location of the property, the overall flow of energy, the placement of windows, doors and staircases, furniture arrangement and curb appeal.

"Going fast is your job...Telling people about it is ours...!"

IWS SPRINT SERIES CHAMPION | STATELINE SPEEDWAY

Doug Cotey made his tow from the Tri Cities worthwhile winning the 2024 IWS Sprint Series title.

Cotey, from West Richland, said the key to securing a 284-272 title win over Cody Ridge from Snohomish was simple.

"I was just consistent throughout the year with making all the races and finishing them," Cotey wrote in an email. He scored in the top 5 three times and top 10 four times.

Cotey did not win any races this year but got his first top 3 in Wenatchee. "That was a big boost in points for me," he said. "That was my best finish since starting in sprint car racing."

Cotey raced motocross at a younger age but got into cars in his 20's.

"I started racing in the Northwest Super Fours and did a bit of racing there," Cotey said.

He did not race for a while but with help from a friend, John Hill, he decided to get into the sprint cars and has been doing this for the past four years.

In real life, Cotey is a registered nurse and has been for 16 years.

Cotey's crew is of course composed of family, his wife Crystal Cotey, sons Steven and Jacob Cotey, Johnny Rumsey and Melissa Morris.

His sponsors are Columbia Safety LLC, out of Pasco WA, Badger Tactical of Pasco, Hot Rod Company out of Spokane for building his motor.

BUMP-TO-PASS CHAMPION | STATELINE SPEEDWAY

Sarah Hodgason won the 2024 Bump-to-Pass championship at Stateline speedway in just her second season behind the wheel.

Her keys to victory were largely showing up and finishing in top 3-5. "I technically had two wins this season, one after the race due to the top 2 finishing cars being DQ'd and one on the track win."

The race on July 3rd was her first official win since Hodgason started racing. "It also gave me a good jump ahead to keep my position in points."

Hodgason describes her initiation to racing as plenty problematic.

"Last season was my first in this class and I had more car issues than I could ever imagine," Hodgason wrote in an email. "I only actually finished three races, ended the season on my fourth transmission, multiple races brakes going out, and a bad wall hit."

Over the winter her team and family made the decision to build a new car since that was not the first big wall hit that car had taken and it was bent in every way possible, Hodgason explained.

"This season I came out with my new Monte Carlo and finished every race, got a couple wins and won season points," Hodgason said. "I am getting faster every race day and cannot wait for next season."

This was Hodgason's fifth season racing and second in Bump To Pass. She finished fifth in Bump to Pass points in 2023. Her first three seasons were spent in the Roadrunner class.

Hodgason works in production at Corbin Custom Works where we make accessories that can be used to make Side by Sides street legal.

Crew/Family consists of Marshall Racing and Blue Line Racing. Sponsors include: Monte and Tammy Burchett, Tim's Special Cut Meats, Hillyard Tire, Bulldog Towing and BLLRS Motorsports.
